

GDPR Policy Statement

Our GDPR Consent Form can be prominently found on the site, and it is separate from our Terms and Conditions. Users can opt in if they choose. We don't use pre-ticked boxes or any other type of default consent. We try to explain things with clarity in plain language to make it as easy as possible for users to understand. We will specify why we want to collect specific data and what we intend to do with it. We will offer granular options to consent so that confusion among users is reduced. We will name our organisation and any third-party controllers that will be relying on the consent. Users will have the opportunity to withdraw from their consent. Individuals can refuse to consent without it affecting their experience. We will not make consent a precondition of a service. If any services we offer online are directed towards children, we will only seek consent if we have age-verification measures and parental consent measures for younger children in place. Our policy is designed to meet the ICO Checklist for GDPR Consent.
